Merrill B, Jeylin L.S, Isabella A, Aleena A

SWOT Analysis Presentation

4A | Nov. 10 | 2026

THE 4 QUADRANTS

1. Strengths- an advantage over others due to characteristics of a business.
2. Weaknesses- placing a disadvantage on the business compared to others.
3. Opportunities- exploits an element to a business's advantage.
4. Threats- something that could potentially cause trouble in a business.

Quadrant 1 and 2 Examples

1. When you see an ad and the ad states why their product is much better and useful than the other product (The ad is showing off their strengths against the competing product)

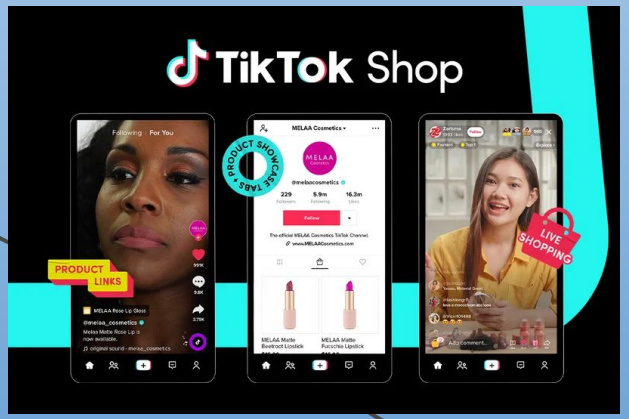

2. The 2nd Quadrant(weaknesses) is not that Different from Quadrant 1 aka strengths, on ads and things like that, it can demonstrate both quadrants at the same time as shown on the images above. When you show the difference that your product is better and more efficient that it would most likely be that more people would buy your product.

Quadrant 3 and 4

- Small Online Clothing Store:
  - Social media platforms (like TikTok Shop or Instagram Reels) adding direct checkout.
  - Holiday season approaching with high gift-shopping traffic.
  - Partnering with local micro-influencers.
- Student / Personal SWOT:
  - Free online courses to learn new tech skills.
  - An internship opening at a company you love.

Shopping

- Copycat brands selling cheaper knock-offs.
- Higher shipping rates from postal carriers.
- Changing fashion trends that drop demand overnight.

Student / Personal SWOT

- Tight job market in your chosen degree field.
- Rising college tuition or cost of living.
- Strict graduation deadlines or scheduling conflicts.

TWO AXES OF ARRANGEMENT

SWOT analysis is relevant because businesses and organizations need to understand their current position before making important decisions. Markets are constantly changing, and companies face competition, new challenges, and opportunities. SWOT analysis helps them recognize their strengths and weaknesses while identifying opportunities and threats.

Understanding the two axes and four quadrants helps businesses organize their ideas and make better decisions. It allows them to look at both internal factors (strengths and weaknesses) and external factors (opportunities and threats) so they can create stronger strategies in prepare for future challenges

Thank you!